SAYS CHANGE-OVER IN SUITUAN UNANIMOUS

According to Gen Fu Tso-yi, recently arrived in Pei-p'ing, the change over in Suiyuan was unanimous, well-accepted, and voluntary. He himself avoided using his influence, knowing that political allegiance must be spontaneous and free to be effective. Reactionaries from Ch'ung-ch'ing tried to break up the Suiyuan soldiers' efforts for peace and liberty, but the troops resisted their efforts and declared for Mao Tse-tung and a new Suiyuan.

The technique of the reactionaries was to divide and to use enticements. They claimed that World War III would break out this year, that there was hope for US aid, that Badger would soon come to China, that the KMT still had a large quantity of troops and weapons, and that they certainly had a future. They stressed the point that no one could cooperate with the Communists, and that the Communists were not interested in the people of Suiyuan, even if they carry out further economic reconstruction and development.

The reactionaries proposed giving Suiyuan more troops, money, and arms. They gave General Tung Ch'iu-wu 500,000 yuan. Nevertheless, the troops felt that they must give themselves to the service of the people. Agents of the reactionaries enticed them with money and official position and brazenly revealed that a volunteer corps of Japanese airmen was being organized, and that an international brigade would come to China to take part in the war. This increased the hatred of the Suiyuan troops against the reactionaries.
